Meek Mill sues Philly PD

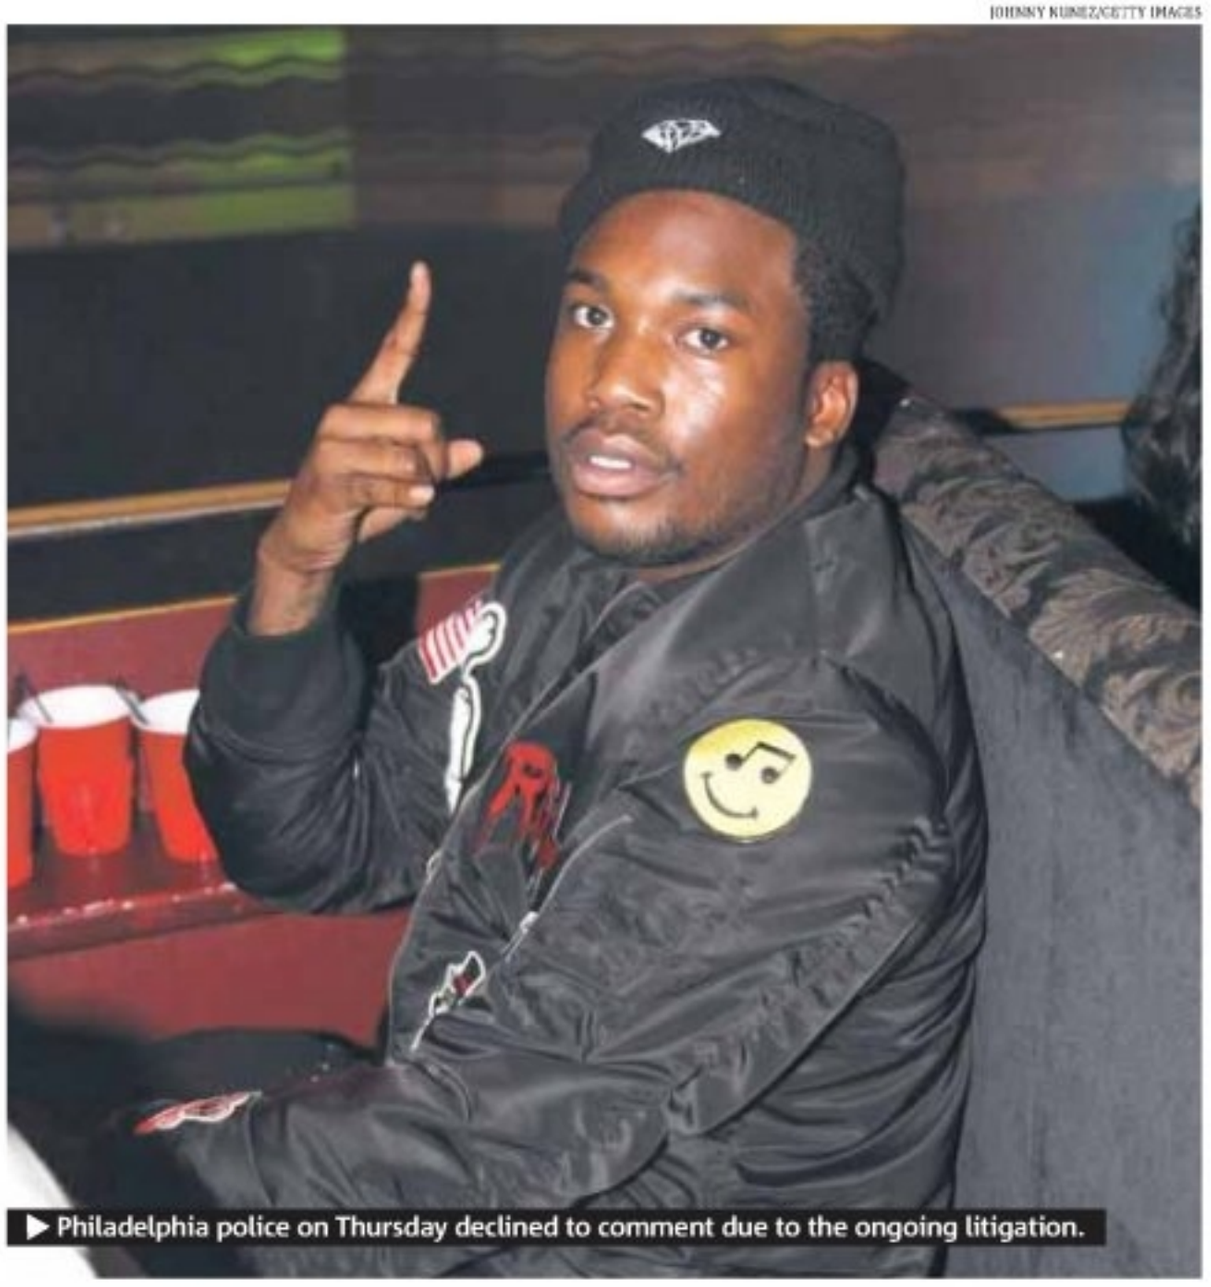
Rapper, aka Robert Williams, alleges civil rights violations stemming from October arrest ◐ Suit alleges police posted pictures of star in custody on Internet

Rapper Meek Mill — known to police as 25-year-old Robert Williams — has filed a federal civil rights lawsuit against the city of Philadelphia and two police officers for allegedly illegally detaining him and posting his picture on Instagram following an Oct. 31 car stop.

"We're trying to find what the immediate financial loss is to Robert," his attorney Anthony Petrone said. "We know that, at a minimum, he forfeited a deposit for a private plane that he hired to take him to Atlanta that night. He had to forfeit a personal appearance fee for the appearance he was scheduled to make later that evening."

According to the complaint, Williams was driving a Range Rover SUV when around 7:30 p.m., police pulled him over near 11th Street and Girard Avenue. The suit claims the stop was "without cause or justification," but resulted from racial profiling many officers allegedly use when conducting stop-and-frisks.

JOHNNY NUNEZ/GETTY IMAGES



▶ Philadelphia police on Thursday declined to comment due to the ongoing litigation.

On the Internet, the truth is found?

Though no charges were filed in connection with the auto stop, Williams did get in some hot water for the incident after claiming that he missed a late October court hearing because he was stuck in New York City due to Hurricane Sandy-related weather conditions.

But the photos that surfaced depicting him at the police precinct around the time of the hearing — some of which he posted to his own social media accounts — put Williams in Philadelphia at the time of the missed hearing, and a judge on Dec. 17 refused to lift his travel ban so he could tour.

The two officers named in the suit handcuffed Williams and took him to the 22nd Police District, where he was allegedly held against his will for about nine hours.

It is there that "the officers posted and published, or caused to be posted and published, on Instagram and other social media" photos of Williams in custody, the suit alleges.

"I know my client wasn't in a position while he was in custody to be taking any photographs, so obviously these photographs were taken of him while in police custody."
PETRONE

Allegations and damages

The complaint claims:

- The two arresting officers intentionally caused Williams to "undergo an unlawful seizure by, among other things, following an unconstitutional stop, frisk and detention practice."
- The city acted with "deliberate indifference" in failing to properly sanction or discipline officers who engage in racial profiling while conducting stop-and-frisks.

Williams is also seeking:

- Compensation for the loss of "numerous sponsorships and endorsements"
- Punitive damages for the forfeiture of his "solitude, seclusion and privacy"
- Damages for anxiety and embarrassment stemming from his "being placed in a false light"

Bogus bomb threat prompts school evacuation

NORTH PHILADELPHIA. Students at Thomas Edison High School were evacuated Thursday after a teacher discovered a threatening note, apparently indicating that someone had placed a bomb inside. Police were called to the school at 151 W. Luzerne Street around 10:30 a.m. and dismissed its students as officers combed the campus for clues. Investigators said the threat turned out to be unfounded. Students were allowed to return about an hour later. METRO

'West Philly tire slasher' suspect arrested

PHILADELPHIA. Police on Wednesday arrested a man they say is responsible for slashing a slew of tires in West Philadelphia earlier this month.

Harry Gaines, 27, was taken into custody near 52nd and Market streets.

59 Cars had slashed tires

He is charged with conspiracy, criminal mischief and related offenses for allegedly slashing the tires of 59 cars parked on Hazel Street between 47th and 50th streets and on the 5300 block of Chancellor Street.

Police said the arrest was the result of intense investigation and anonymous tips. It is unclear whether a $10,000 reward will be paid out. METRO

'Baby moo' found safe

VILLANOVA. Investigators are looking for a college student who allegedly kidnapped "Baby Moo" from Hope's Cookies in Rosemont, Pa. The creature is one-half of a statue depicting a calf and its mother that's become a local landmark.

"Mama Moo is inconsolable and wants her baby back," owner Herb Spivak said in a statement on Thursday, offering a $500 reward for the calf's safe return.

"Baby Moo" was recovered around 2 p.m. when a Villanova University police officer saw a student exiting a cab with the statue. The suspect fled but left the calf behind. METRO

Police alert drivers to rise in car break-ins

NORTH PHILADELPHIA. Police in the district covering Port Richmond, Juniata Park and parts of Kensington are warning drivers about a recent rise in car break-ins, especially involving those parked near the SEPTA Market-Frankford El.

Investigators said that thieves have in recent months targeted vehicles with electronics and GPS systems inside. They said drivers should take those items with them when they exit and should completely close all windows and lock all doors. Purchasing theft deterrent devices is also encouraged.

Anyone seeing a person looking into or touching cars is asked to report the incident immediately and to provide police with a full description of the suspect. METRO/AW

'Unsolved Philadelphia' shines light on forgotten cases

▶ Colon

Twenty-two-year-old Melanie Colon disappeared in May. Her bullet-riddled body was found in the woods four days later.

Franchesca "Cheka" Alvarado, also 22, traveled to Atlantic City in March with a male friend. He returned, but she hasn't been heard from since.

Both women will be featured on upcoming episodes of "Unsolved Philadelphia," a series on public access channel PhillyCam that acts as the city's own "America's Most Wanted."

"We would love to spotlight any case that's unsolved, but one of the driving forces is whether family members are willing to talk about the case and are wanting to get justice, wanting to share their story," said executive producer Grady Jones, who founded the show two years ago. "You'd be surprised — not everyone does."

In this instance, both families have been extremely active in helping to keep awareness of the cases alive," Jones said.

Colon's brother Ralphiee said he hopes the show brings his family's long search for answers to an end. "Getting closure for Melanie will be the biggest weight lifted off all of our shoulders," he said. "Someone out there knows something."

Arrests already

The show has already garnered tips leading to arrests in at least two cases.

- A woman was arrested in May 2011 for a Juniata hit-and-run the year before that killed Liliana Acevedo, 29.
- Jones said an arrest was also made in the 2005 shooting death of 18-year-old Germantown woman Chakia Saunders after a segment on her murder aired.
- The show airs at 7 p.m. Wednesdays and Saturdays on Comcast channel 66 and Verizon channels 29 and 30.

Massacre reported in Syria's Homs

More than 100 people were shot, stabbed or possibly burned to death by government forces in the Syrian city of Homs, a monitoring group said on Thursday, and fierce fighting raged across the country. The British-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights said women and children were among the 106 people killed by forces loyal to President Bashar al-Assad forces who stormed Basatin al-Hasawiya, a poor district on the edge of Homs, on Tuesday.

The massacre in the central city came the same day twin explosions killed over 80 people at Aleppo's university in the north, according to the group.

Reuters could not independently confirm reports due to reporting restrictions in Syria.

Syrian warplanes and troops pursued a country-wide offensive on Thursday, activists and state media said, bombing rebel-held areas and clashing with insurgents who have pushed into cities.

Government forces clashed on Thursday with insurgents in the cities of Deraa, Hama, Homs, Aleppo, Damascus and east of Deir al-Zor, the Observatory said. Only the coastal Assad strongholds of Latakia and Tartous were spared violence. REUTERS

Soldier defers plea in Afghan shootings trial

A U.S. soldier accused of killing 16 villagers in two forays from his camp in Afghanistan deferred making a plea before a U.S. military court on Thursday to charges of premeditated murder, for which prosecutors are seeking the death penalty.

U.S. Staff Sgt. Robert Bales, a veteran of four combat tours in Iraq and Afghanistan, is accused of gunning down the villagers in their homes in two villages in Afghanistan's Kandahar province. Bales, 39, wearing green military dress, entered his deferred plea through one of his defense attorneys, who also waived reading of charges against Bales.

Prosecutors say Bales, 39, acted alone and with "chilling premeditation" when, armed with a pistol, a rifle and a grenade launcher, he left his base twice, returning in the middle of his rampage to tell a fellow soldier: "I just shot up some people." REUTERS

Deadspin: Te'o tip from e-mail

The tip that led to the revelation that one of the most widely recounted U.S. sports narratives of the past year was a hoax came to the editors of an online sports blog as many of their news tips do: an unsolicited e-mail.

It led Deadspin.com assignment editor Timothy Burke on the hunt of a story that exposed the heart-wrenching tale of standout Notre Dame linebacker Manti Te'o's dead girlfriend as a fabrication, Burke said on CNN. Te'o sprang to national prominence last fall when the senior co-captain was seen heroically leading the Fighting Irish to an underdog victory within days of learning his grandmother had died. It was widely reported, Te'o's girlfriend had died of leukemia within hours of his grandmother's death. "We got an e-mail last week at Deadspin.com that said 'Hey, there's something real weird about Lennay Kekua, Manti Te'o's allegedly dead girlfriend. You guys should check it out,'" Burke said. REUTERS

THE MAN OF OUR DREAMS

Advice

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

letters@metro.us

CNN=POLITICS

I have to confess that I, too, have had an imaginary girlfriend. To be honest, I think they all were up until I met my wife. So while I can't pretend to know what was really going on with Notre Dame's star linebacker Manti Te'o, as Chris Rock would say, "I understand."

We live in a complicated world in which many people are not what they appear. Lance Armstrong has pedaled off of his pedestal. David Petraeus ended up with a biographer who wrote not only between the lines but also between the sheets. I don't follow pop culture closely, but I'm led to believe even that adorable little Lindsay Lohan has had difficulties.

Which brings me to Inauguration Day. Here in D.C., where giving false impressions is an art, President Barack Obama is heading into his second term amid all the expected hoopla. Over the next few days, he will be paraded, serenaded, lauded and applauded. He will deliver a soaring speech, shake hands and assure supporters they were right to reelect him. Then he will probably let many of them down.

It's not entirely his fault. It happens to every president, and all of us are to blame. Because campaigns are not merely about what a candidate says, they are also about what we hear. Supporters, like lonely souls on Internet dating services, project their wishes onto the candidate. They convince themselves that their views and his are much more closely aligned than the evidence would warrant. In his first presidential race, for example, Obama was repeatedly portrayed as a radical liberal — then many left-leaning voters seemed astonished when he proved too accommodating to Republicans and big business, and not nearly idealistic enough for their tastes.

Quoted

"Here in D.C. ... giving false impressions is an art."

So the inauguration, even for a second term, is where those dueling realities collide. It's where the imaginary candidate and the real president meet as if on a blind date, and we all get to see what they have in common — and decide whether the relationship we've bet on is one we can live with.

Panetta: People don't need assault weapons

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta joined the gun-control debate on Thursday when he told troops at a military base in Italy that only soldiers needed armor-piercing bullets or assault weapons.

Asked by a soldier what President Barack Obama would do to protect school children from gun violence without infringing Americans' right to own guns, Panetta said action was needed. He told members of the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team at Vicenza that there were areas where steps could be taken.

Books

1 'Red Moon' Benjamin Percy
Release date: May 7
An Advanced Reader Copy of "Red Moon" came to the Metro offices and we can't put it down. A thriller with a literary bent, "Red Moon" is a mixture of a supernatural thriller (hello, werewolves!), a love story and a political allegory. It's going to be your summer read. Trust us.

2 'Tenth of December' George Saunders
Release date: Jan. 8
This has already been hailed by the New York Times as the "best book of the year" and it's only January. Saunders, the literary darling and author behind the beloved, straight-up weird short story collection "Civil War Land in Bad Decline" returns to the form with this latest collection.

ONES TO WATCH IN 2013

These actors, directors, rockers, rappers and writers will be all over your media feed in the 11 months to come

NEW IN THE NEW YEAR

Film & television

1 Nicholas Hoult
Age: 23
Provenance: Berkshire, U.K.
Occupation: Actor
New projects: "Warm Bodies" (Feb. 1), "Jack the Giant Slayer" (March 1)
You may remember these blue eyes from 2002's "About a Boy," Hoult's first appearance in a feature, but more recently he starred as Beast in 2011's "X-Men: First Class." This year, he gets two starring roles: first as the lovelorn zombie in "Warm Bodies" and then as the title character in a retelling of "Jack and the Beanstalk." With a role in 2014's reboot of "Mad Max," we expect Hoult to stay in the headlines for quite a while.

2 Neill Blomkamp
Age: 33
Provenance: Johannesburg, South Africa

Occupation: Director
New project: "Elysium" (Aug. 9)
This up-and-comer knocked it out of the park with the critically acclaimed 2009 alien invasion thriller "District 9" — his first full-length film. That success is rewarded with an equally futuristic drama with plenty of star power and studio dollars behind it. Starring Matt Damon and Jodie Foster, "Elysium" imagines the world of 2159, when the elite have escaped to a man-made space station while the less privileged are left to fend for themselves on the ravaged Earth.

3 Rebel Wilson
Age: 26
Provenance: Sydney, Australia
Occupation: Actress
New projects: "Struck By Lightning" (in theaters), "Pain and Gain" (April 26)
Wilson has already started to make an impact with roles in "Bridesmaids," "Pitch Perfect" and "Bachelorette." In 2013 we'll witness her continued climb to the top of Hollywood's new class of funny ladies with her role in the Mark Wahlberg-fronted, Michael Bay thriller "Pain & Gain." No doubt she'll provide some much-needed comic relief to a drama about three body builders who get caught up in an extortion scheme.

4 AnnaSophia Robb
Age: 19
Provenance: Denver, Colo.
Occupation: Actress
New projects: Robb scored what was perhaps this year's most coveted television role for a young actress: that of a 16-year-old Carrie Bradshaw. Starring in the "Sex and the City" prequel "The Carrie Diaries" on The CW, Robb has the wit and charm to pay homage to Sarah Jessica Parker's iconic performance, yet make this Miss Bradshaw her own.

HEIDI PATALANO & AMBER RAY

Music

1. Savages
Savages' punctuated attack on every song is every bit as vicious and thrilling as their name implies. The sound of this London band is what is traditionally called post-punk (sounding like a cross between Joy Division and early U2) but the energy is 100 percent punk rock. They've officially released a single and a live EP, but expect a full-length soon.

2. Night Beds
Winston Yellen has the sort of voice that could quiet a huge room. It's not necessarily the Fleet Foxes/My Morning Jacket delivery as much as realizing that this is somebody saying something he feels deeply — and there's not much more contagious than that. If his song, "Even If We Try," is any indication, his forthcoming album, "Country Sleep" (out on Dead Oceans next month), will be a stunner.

3. Skaters
Much of the music on last year's "Schemers" EP feels so New Yorky that you can almost hear the crinkle of leather jackets. They have a Stokes-like flair, but Michael Ian Cummings' distinct voice, so often shouting in his previous bands Dead Trees and Furvis, chills out here.

4. Kingsley Flood
The people who helped propel Kingsley Flood into winning a Boston Music Award for Best Americana Band last fall obviously hadn't heard "Battles," their expansive new album due out early next month. On its 12 songs, the band rocks, stomps and digs in with a punk urgency that almost feels like a reaction to being pinned to one specific genre. There are fuzzy basses, horns, eerie keyboards, coil-y electric guitars and tight melodic turns of phrases that bring to mind groups as varied as the Clash and the Shins.

5. Guards
That this trio call their debut "In Guards We Trust" is a good indication of their singular sound. They combine the dreamy sing-along melodies of MGMT with the restrained polish of latter era Pixies.

6. Mykki Blanco
Mykki Blanco, the gender-bending alter ego of Michael Quattlebaum Jr., mixes tribal beats with radical rap. The solo artist follows in the nontraditional path of recent indie hip-hop a la Odd Future, successfully dipping into punk and electro while retaining individuality. When her EP "Betty Rubble: The Initiation" drops in March that will only add to the buzz she generated with November's "Cosmic Angel: The Illuminati Prince/ss."

AHEAD OF THE GAME

Actor and producer Mark Wahlberg offers his recipe for making a hit
'Broken City' adds another shadowy do-gooder to his résumé

Need a movie made on a shoestring? Mark Wahlberg might be your man.

The former bad boy rapper turned Oscar-nominated actor and now film and TV producer shared his recipe for making films: "You've gotta come in with that television mentality. You've got a lot less money and a lot less time, but you've got a great piece of material," he says.

The next ingredient is attracting top talent — like Russell Crowe, Wahlberg's co-star in his latest film, "Broken City" — by serving them juicy roles and offering them a share of the profits.

In the crime-thriller genre — where Wahlberg has carved his niche — at a time when Hollywood studios are reticent to take risks, it's the only way to stay ahead of the curve, he says.

In fact, he's baffled by massive movie budgets. "I was just in New Mexico shooting this movie in 38 days, and before us 'The Lone Ranger' was there," he recalls. "It's about two guys on horses and it cost $250 million to make. What the f— were these horses doing? Do they fly? I don't know. It's crazy."

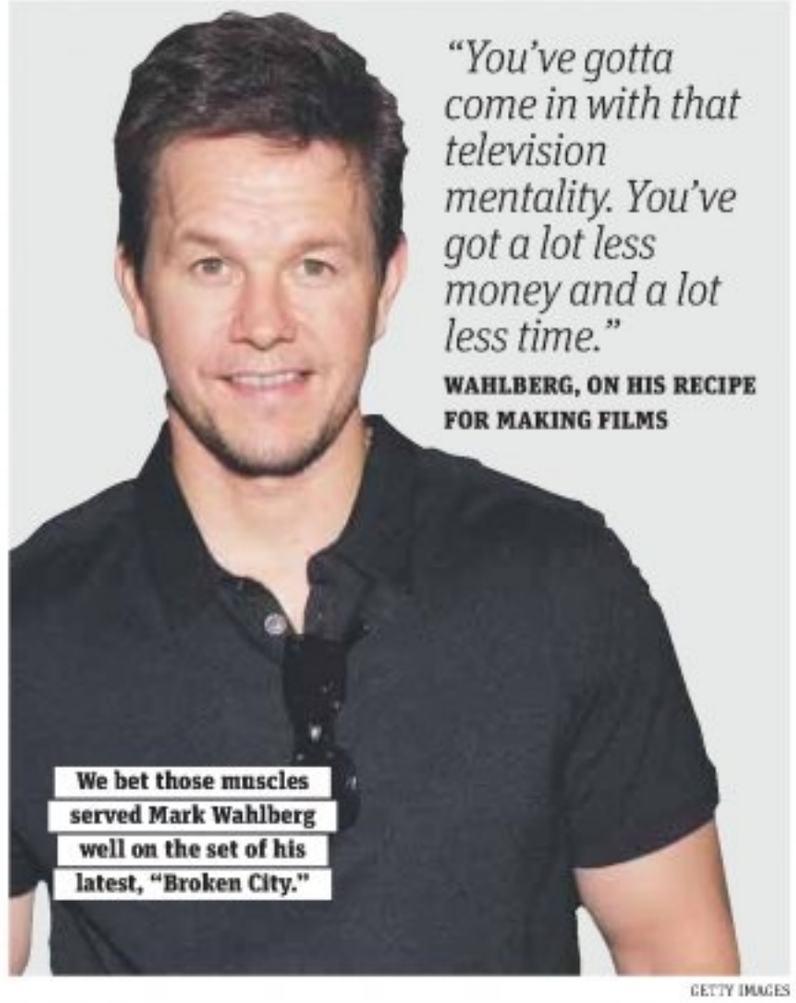
By contrast, "Broken City," in theaters Friday, cost around $55 million to make. In it, Wahlberg plays an ex-NYPD officer haunted by his past deadly vigilantism. Now as a private detective, he's been hired by New York's mayor (Crowe) to track the infidelities of the politician's wife (Catherine Zeta-Jones).

The murky lawman is a role Wahlberg has come to love. "I can certainly appreciate and relate to these guys. The bad guy who is trying to do something good is usually the one I root for," he says.

And out of all those shadowy do-gooders, which is his favorite?

He grins.

"Dignam. 'The Departed' was the most fun, because I'm from that world. I've spent a lot of time with those cops and I just got to f—ing steamroll everybody."



We bet those muscles served Mark Wahlberg well on the set of his latest, "Broken City."

WAHLBERG, ON HIS RECIPE FOR MAKING FILMS

Work ethic

Wahlberg's working-class roots are no secret. As the youngest of nine children, he's built a multimillion-dollar empire out of virtually nothing — and a near-irrational fear of losing everything keeps him going. "I always feel like there's a good chance I'll end up back there," he says. "I keep that as a possibility and that keeps me focused and working hard. I don't want to let my guard down or feel too comfortable and start being complacent — then you start feeling entitled and everything else. I'm ready to go dig a ditch if I have to, whatever I have to do to provide for my family."

'The Last Stand'

Director: Kim Jee-Woon
Stars: Arnold Schwarzenegger, Johnny Knoxville
Grade: ❶❷❸❹❺
It has been nearly a decade since Arnold Schwarzenegger has led a big-screen blockbuster, but in "The Last Stand," the sexagenarian is proving he's still got some fight in him. The threadbare story of a small-town sheriff determined to prevent a drug lord from escaping into Mexico certainly doesn't break any new ground in the action department, but for fans of the genre it's a welcome and winking return from the former Governator.
● STEVE GOW

'Mama'

Director: Andres Muschietti
Stars: Jessica Chastain, Nikolaj Coster-Waldau
Grade: ❶❷❸❹❺
Tragic circumstances led to two small children (Megan Charpentier and Isabelle Nelisse) being abandoned for five years in a cabin in the woods. Rescued, they are adopted by their uncle ("Game of Thrones" star Nikolaj Coster-Waldau) and his girlfriend (Jessica Chastain), but the question remains: Who is the mysterious Mama they keep talking about?

This film has some nice, subtle creepy reveals, a vivid dream sequence and, of course, the ethereal Mama, who occasionally resembles a giant hairball on the floor, but is eerie nonetheless.

It's spooky rather than scary, but has appropriately creepy kids — the little one even scurries around the floor on all fours like a tiny silverback gorilla — and enough jolts to earn a recommendation.

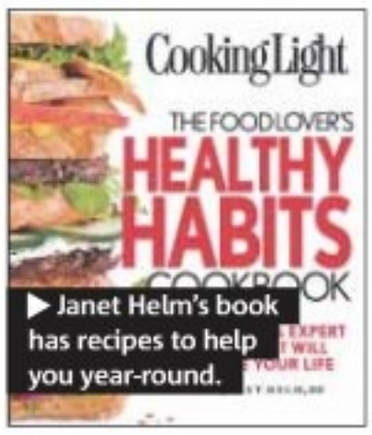
NEW IN THE NEW YEAR

3 Healthy habits to adopt this year

It's easy to take for granted the root of a New Year's resolution — to be resolute. According to Janet Helm, registered dietician and author of "Cooking Light: The Food Lover's Healthy Habits Cookbook," getting healthy — and staying healthy all year — is about starting small. "Your goal should be attainable. If you have success, that fuels greater success and then you can celebrate the little victories."

COURTESY OF COOKING LIGHT

▶ Check out our website, www.metro.us, for the recipe for pasta with black kale, caramelized onions and parsnips.



▶ Janet Helm's book has recipes to help you year-round.

1 Cook more often
Firing up the stove — say, three times a week — is the foundation of healthy eating. Eating out generally means you'll consume at least 50 percent more calories, and cooking is truly the only way to control what you eat.

2 Eat a healthy breakfast
"When you start your day on the right foot, it leads to better habits throughout the day," Helm says. Eating breakfast helps curb temptations for the rest of the day. Helm's recipes point toward a breakfast with whole grains, fruits or vegetables (or both), lean protein and low-fat dairy.

3 Be a mindful eater
Mindful eating isn't about saying "namaste" every time you chow down — it's about recognizing when you're hungry and when you're full, Helm says. Diets that demonize certain foods make it hard to enjoy them at all, so Helm suggests eating all kinds of foods and focusing on controlling portions instead of restrictions.

@RebelWilson
I would never online date..unless it was for 'comedy research.' The other things I've done for 'comedy research' include fat camp, drinking..

@JoshRadnor
I would be a terrible matador.

@rainnwilson
Zero Dark Thirty would have been better if Usama Bin Laden had been dressed like 'Waldo'.

@AlbertBrooks
Bless me Oprah for I have sinned.

@mindykaling
I wish Taylor Swift and I were the youngest and oldest sisters, respectively, of a large Jane Austen-y type family

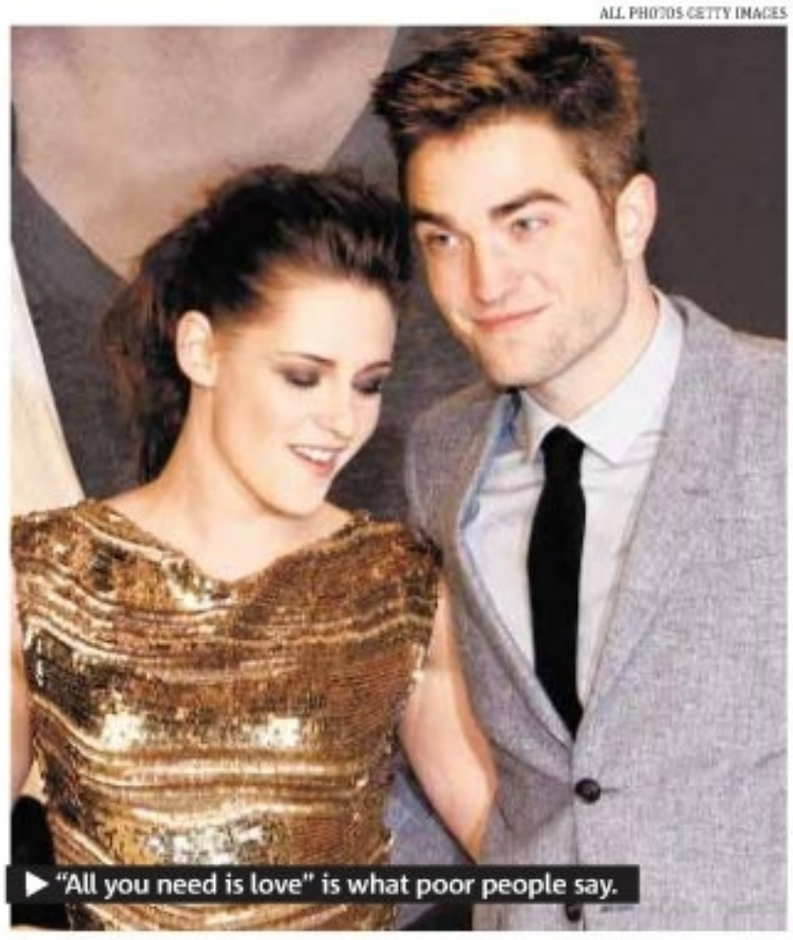
Stewart, Pattinson top highest-grossing couples

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES



▶ "All you need is love" is what poor people say.

We've frequently wondered why Kristen Stewart and Robert Pattinson got back together. Even before her little fling with Rupert Sanders fueled an entire summer's worth of gossip columns (thanks again, girl!), these two never looked all that happy.

But now, we understand: Together, they've helped the "Twilight" franchise rake in $635 million at the domestic box office, which is only a fraction of the films' $3.3 billion worldwide haul. This makes them the highest-grossing romantic celebrity co-stars, according to a new list from Forbes.

Being involved in real life wasn't a requirement for the list, but it seemed to help. Pattinson and Stewart handily beat No. 2 — "The Vow" costars Rachel McAdams and Channing Tatum — by a cool $510 million. Not even the iconic Carrie and Mr. Big could compete: Sarah Jessica Parker and Chris Noth raked in a mere $95 million for their "Sex and the City" movies.

$635M
Amount 'Twilight' has made in the U.S.

Is it their unique chemistry, or is it the fact that "Twilight" fans will stare at anything that sparkles for two hours? Doesn't matter — for $635 million, we'd throw love to the werewolves, too.

Let's just be really weird friends

The New York Post reported that Russell Crowe and Dita Von Teese enjoyed "a romantic couple's massage" at the Four Seasons hotel in New York last month and have been getting flirty. Now, Crowe has taken to Twitter to deny the story.

"Dita Von Teese is brave, smart, sweet and elegant. She is a friend of mine. Who wouldn't want friends like that? Friends, not lovers," Crowe tweeted.

Be honest: There's no way you thought a story about Russell Crowe, Dita Von Teese and Twitter was going to end that classy.

Betty White is cooler than you

Betty White turned 91 yesterday, and she received quite the gift. In honor of the actress — who is a longtime animal lover and activist — the Lifeline Program adopted a red-tailed boa from the Los Angeles Zoo in her name.

Betty and the snake, Jacob, starred together in a music video to benefit the zoo last year. "Jacob is good as gold and cuddles in my arms," says White in a statement that we could only hope to make someday.

Didn't send Betty a gift yet? She's asking fans to donate to the Morris Animal Foundation.

Talking points

Does Lohan have a job on the side?

Lindsay Lohan has reportedly found a new way to help pay off her hefty debts. Her father, Michael Lohan, and other sources claim that the troubled actress is making money working as a high-class escort, according to Star magazine. "She is getting paid to date rich men," Michael says, putting the blame squarely on his ex-wife, Dina Lohan. "Dina is pimping her out. It's disgusting." But so far there are no allegations of Lindsay providing any services more intimate than acting as arm candy. "The dates last for days, and the guys pay for everything — hotel, travel costs, food, whatever — as well as jewelry and other gifts," another source tells the magazine.

Kidman is surprisingly hard to shock

Nicole Kidman has been getting plenty of attention for her Golden Globe-nominated role in "The Paperboy" thanks to an infamous scene in which she urinates on Zach Efron. But Kidman doesn't get what the big deal is. "I just don't find urination shocking. I think I peed in the beginning of 'Eyes Wide Shut,' too. But then, I don't find a lot of things shocking. Violence is a lot more shocking than sex — sex is primal," she tells the Hollywood Reporter. "I felt shy singing in 'Moulin Rouge,' but peeing — no, not shy."

J.Lo would like to thank the Academy

Jennifer Lopez's career is doing just fine, but there's at least one item she still has her heart set on: an Oscar. "I think everybody that has ever taken acting seriously would love to be recognized in that way," Lopez tells E! News. "Of course! Why not?" She's even good about keeping her acceptance speech up to date, should the need for it arise. "It changes every so often over the years," Lopez says. "Different people, different things."

Looking good for the weekend

1: Not to creep on Chloe Grace Moretz's feet, but we want her kitty cat flats — bad.

2: Looking extra dapper, 50 Cent stopped by the Fifth Avenue Barnes & Noble in New York on Wednesday to promote his new fitness book, "Formula 50."

3: Leather cocktail dress? We're almost buying it, Elisabeth Moss.

4: Things that are happening at Hong Kong Fashion Week: This.

5: Is it just us, or does Bradley Cooper look 20 percent hotter when in Madrid? The actor was promoting "Silver Linings Playbook" earlier this week.

6: Photos we'll never get sick of: Daniel Day-Lewis looking so suave while mugging for "Lincoln."

13 Reasons to brave the winter of 2013

This time of year in Philly, it's tempting to hibernate But there's plenty out there to do We found 13 reasons to get you out and about BYO hats and scarves, for best results

1 Restaurant Week
Starting Sunday, a ton of Center City restaurants are serving up $35 three-course dinners and $20 lunches in the name of Restaurant Week. Why should you go outside when Ekta delivers? Because it's good to remember how to order food with real pants on. Dress pretty, invite someone prettier and make out in the cab a little — it's cold, after all.
Jan. 20-25 & Jan. 27-Feb. 1, www.centercityphila.org

2 Skating at the River Rink

▶ Amada's sangria goes well with Restaurant Week.
JASON VARNEY

Fun fact about global warming: It makes ice skating by the river in Philadelphia way more comfortable. Stop by the River Rink this Saturday (12:30-2:30 & 3-5:30 p.m.) for professional skating demos courtesy of the Philadelphia International Festival of the Arts.
101 S. Columbus Blvd., www.riverrink.com

3 Jim Gaffigan
If Jim Gaffigan stopped writing new jokes after his Hot Pocket triumph, we would have understood. But he didn't, and the world is a funnier place for it. Jan. 26, Tower Theater, www.ticketmaster.com

4 Free spring rolls
If it's literally freezing, there's even more reason to venture outside. At Davio's Northern Italian Steakhouse, when the thermometer hits 32 degrees or lower, customers at the bar will get a complimentary order of their Philly CheeseSteak Spring Rolls. "The chopped steak, with melted provolone, parm and Philadelphia cream cheese tucked inside a lightly fried, paper-thin crust is best served piping hot!" executive chef David Boyle tells us. "The spring rolls are the perfect hearty snack on a cold winter night. They are sure to warm you right up!"

9 Pilobolus Dance Theatre
The Connecticut-based dance company Pilobolus makes use of a unique physical language that finds its members' bodies intertwining and separating in kaleidoscopic patterns. The prospect of another artist learning that language may seem daunting, but the company has thrived on collaboration over its four-decade existence.

"Every time we collaborate with somebody from the outside, we first have to teach them how to collaborate," says dancer Jun Kuribayashi. "Someone like a cartoonist is used to having complete and utter control over every aspect of what they're presenting to their audience. But we're living organisms, so it's very difficult."

Pilobolus' collaborations have included cartoonist Art Spiegelman, author Maurice Sendak and puppeteer Basil Twist. They've appeared on "Sesame Street" and "Late Night with Conan O'Brien" and interpreted the Best Picture nominees at the 79th Academy Awards.

The program they're bringing to Philly this weekend features several collaborations. Two of the pieces spring from "All Is Not Lost," a video the company made with choreographer Trish Sie and pop band OK Go. "Azimuth" takes MacArthur Genius award-winning juggler Michael Moschen's art to a celestial plane, while "Automaton" looks at our plugged-in world with Moroccan-Belgian choreographer Sidi Larbi Cherkaoui. The final work, "Gnomen," gets back to basics; a tribute to a former company member who died of AIDS, the piece pares the company down to four male dancers, as it was at its founding. Through Sunday, Annenberg Center, www.annenbergcenter.org ● SHAUN BRADY

13 'Assassin'
The moment playwright David Robson saw the headline of Jack Tatum's obituary in the New York Times, he knew what his next play was going to be.

Known as "the Assassin," Tatum was one of the most respected (and/or feared) defensive football players in the NFL. He is perhaps best remembered for a hit delivered on Aug. 12, 1978, which left Darryl Stingley a quadriplegic.

The obit read: "Jack Tatum, Whose Tackle Paralyzed Player, Dies at 61."

"To me, that legacy was just so tragic," says Robson. "As a playwright, certain things really grab your attention. Well, that certainly grabbed mine."

In a rare co-production, "Assassin" will begin previews this weekend at InterAct Theater, but will move to Act II Playhouse in February.

Surprisingly, the Stingley character never makes an appearance in Robson's script.

Instead, the play takes place in a Chicago hotel room, where a Tatum-esque character confronts the paralyzed player's lawyer.

"I knew the Tatum character was going to be in the play from the beginning," explains Robson. "I knew each of them made attempts to reconcile, but never put it together. Unfinished business, lack of closure — those are things that get a playwright writing."

Refresh yourself

Dermatologists aren't just good for mole checks They can help you look great, too! Top NYC-based dermatologist Dr. Ariel Ostad on the new treatments people are talking about

When you look in the mirror and don't like what you see, the first piece of practical advice NYC-based dermatologist Dr. Ariel Ostad has is, "Don't be too hard on yourself. Too many people are too hard on themselves." His second piece of advice? "Don't be ashamed if you want to look better." We live, he says, in a competitive environment, and there are plenty of nonsurgical procedures that can help you look better and feel refreshed. We talked to him about two hot new treatments.

Dr. Ostad

Ultherapy

"This exciting new procedure is a skin lifting [and] tightening procedure that uses ultrasound to penetrate deep into the skin to cause contractions," he says. Dr. Ostad says Ultherapy is "remarkable" because it helps the doctor see layers of skin and penetrate deep enough to make a change. "In the past, we haven't been able to penetrate the layer of tissue which is called the SMAS [Sub-Muscular Aponeurotic System], which is the layer that is right above the muscle used by surgeons to pull back the skin." Ultherapy can be used almost anywhere: Dermatologists can tighten the neck and lift jowls to create a much smoother, defined jaw line. They can also raise eyebrows and improve hooding on the eyelids. "I've used it for patients post-pregnancy for the sagging skin, stretch marks and loose skin from multiple pregnancies. It's remarkable what we can achieve."

GOODSHOOT

Fillers

Fillers, notes Dr. Ostad, are nothing new. But now there are much better options available for the consumer. "The issue with past fillers is that they didn't work with really fine lines around the upper lips and crow's feet.

We now have fillers — one that comes to mind is Belotero — that can target those lines without lumpiness or bumps. It does an amazing job in filling in those lines really nicely."

Dorothy Robinson
dorothy.robinson@metro.us

Dermatology versus plastic surgery

"These are nonsurgical procedures that have little to no risks," he says. "Plastic surgery can require a lot more downtime and can change the way you look, sometimes not for the better. These treatments are just modest improvements that won't change your facial structure."

G. Love: 'There's no other white kid on the street playing Dobro and rapping'

The Special Sauce man reflects on 20 years of dodging genres and going between Boston and Philly addresses 'For me, there are no rules now,' he says

GETTY IMAGES

G. Love brings his signature blend of hip-hop/blues to the TLA on Friday.

Twenty years ago, after moving from Philadelphia to Boston, G. Love's musical career quickly rose from the streets and subway stations to regular club gigs that eventually landed him a record deal that brought him back to Philly.

"I moved to Boston because I knew it was one of the only places you could get a permit to be a street performer," says G. Love (born Garrett Dutton). "I looked like a homeless person. I had this cart with a folding chair, my amp, a mic stand and all my gear and my guitar. I would wear a seersucker suit and Pumas with the fat laces. It was pretty competitive out in Harvard Square and I wouldn't make too much money, but I got my s— together and that led to some solo shows."

After Mark Sandman of Morphine got G. Love a weekly gig in Cambridge, interest from record companies soon followed. The headstrong 20-year-old who started merging hip-hop with his Delta blues and Dobro guitar had created a signature blend of musical stylings very unique for the time.

Hip-hop/blues may seem like a strange classification, but ask G. Love if he finds it odd and he'll tell you, "Well, no, because I made it up! I really believe that," he says. "I remember the exact moment that I stumbled upon it and I was playing on the street in Philly and I finished playing this sort of driving blues groove of mine, and it was just a two-chord jam — nothing fancy. I just started rapping these lyrics from Eric B. and Rakim's 'Paid in Full,' and it worked. I was like, 'Damn that's some s— right there!' That was kind of an epiphany for me. I thought 'There's no other white kid on the street playing Dobro and rapping, I bet.'"

The album is on Brushfire Records, a label run by Jack Johnson, who he frequently collaborates with and even had as a special guest on his record when Johnson was still relatively unknown. But Dutton sounds like he's doing anything but fixin' to die.

"It's funny," he says. "It's our 20th year right now. ... I just want to make really honest and raw music. ... For me, there are no rules right now. It's just about making amazing records."

Cocktail recipe

Feeling blue?

Blue Monday, which falls this year on Jan. 21, is said to be the most depressing day of the year: The holidays are over, post-splurge bills are piling up and, oh yeah, it's freezing out. Toast to your misery with this cool concoction — we hope it brings at least a tiny smile to your face.

SVEDKA Iceberg
1 ½ parts SVEDKA Vodka
Splash of Blue Curacao

INSTRUCTIONS:
Pour all ingredients into a cocktail shaker filled with ice. Shake gently and strain into a chilled rocks glass with ice.

Paying their own way

Radiohead threw the music industry a curveball when, in 2007, the band released its album "In Rainbows" using a pay-what-you-want model. Permitting fans to potentially walk away with the album for free wouldn't normally be a sound idea. But, for a band that has since sold more than 30 million albums worldwide and has won five Grammy Awards, there wasn't much risk involved. Ultimately, Radiohead would make its money back, and then some.

Everyone Everywhere, the Philadelphia-based indie-rock four-piece, has used a similar model since 2008, allowing fans at concerts to pay what they want for CDs and other merchandise. Last year, the band held an online presale for 100 vinyl copies of its second eponymous album on a pay-what-you-want model. Within 20 minutes, they broke even, selling all 100 copies.

Everyone Everywhere play The Barbary Saturday night.

In a time when illegal downloading is the norm, and bands are seeking creative ways to distribute music (and ideally break even), it's a fascinating approach. "We wouldn't care if we'd lost money," says bassist Matt Scottoline, 26. "We know it's not a money-making enterprise to be in an indie band. We just want people to hear our music. We worked really hard on this album, but it's more gratifying for us for people to hear it, even if they only pay 50 cents. None of us expect to ever quit our day jobs."

ELLIOTT SHARP

"We're worried about all sorts of existential crap, and where our lives are going. Luckily, these things make good fodder for the arts."

MATT SCOTTOLINE

New 'Atlas' model is lighter than its predecessor ◗ Includes 'EcoBoost' turbo engine to get more miles per gallon ◗ GM, Chrysler also showcase trucks

▶ The Ford Atlas concept truck is lighter and more fuel efficient than its predecessor.

Ford Motor Co. gave a sneak peek on Tuesday at the future direction of its highly popular F-150 pickup truck series by unveiling a concept version called the "Atlas" that reflects Ford's push to improve gas mileage across its product line.

The vehicle, due out for the 2015 model year, will be much lighter than its predecessor and has a more rugged look. It also represents a vision of the future of pickup trucks that contrasts with that of rival General Motors Co.

The F-150 concept is outfitted with the next generation of Ford's turbocharged engine, known as EcoBoost, to wring out more miles per gallon. It also features active grille and wheel shutters to improve aerodynamics — a technology that improves fuel economy by about 2 percent, Ford has previously said.

The concept "shows that we're going to do whatever it takes to be preferred in the market segment," Chief Executive Alan Mulally told reporters Tuesday during an industry conference held in conjunction with the Detroit auto show.

"Every indication that we're absolutely committed to improving these vehicles is a major proof point for the Ford plan," he said. "That is what is going to allow us to grow."

The second-largest U.S. automaker is cutting the weight of its cars and trucks and using turbocharged engines to meet stricter federal standards for fuel economy and attract the growing number of truck buyers who value fuel efficiency.

Boosting fuel economy in trucks is particularly challenging because they are large and must be capable of towing heavy loads. Using hybrid and electric car technology remains extremely costly.

While Ford said the next F-150 would be lighter than the outgoing version, executives stopped short of specifying the kinds of materials or weight savings targeted for the new F-150. Raj Nair, head of global product development, said Ford is exploring the use of lightweight materials like high-strength steel, aluminum and carbon fiber across its lineup.

"Part of our strategy is to have all of our vehicles go on a diet in terms of weight," Chief Operating Officer Mark Fields said on the sidelines of the Detroit auto show. REUTERS

Ford must comply with the U.S. government's target for corporate average fuel economy of 54.5 mpg by 2025. This translates to 36 mpg or higher in real world driving, on average.

Competition

Ford's U.S. rivals, General Motors and Chrysler Group LLC, have showcased new trucks as well. GM will begin selling a new Chevrolet Silverado and Colorado, considered GM's most crucial launches since its 2009 bankruptcy.

GM and Ford are fierce competitors in the full-size pickup segment, which accounted for about 11 percent of the U.S. auto market last year and will grow increasingly competitive as more truck owners look to replace their vehicles.

But in their latest truck redesigns, they have diverged in their focus, with Ford placing more emphasis on fuel economy. REUTERS

▶ Jeep's obstacle course really lets attendees get a feel for the vehicles.

The Philadelphia Auto Show will feature 700 cars ranging from the $12,000 Kia to the $440,000 Rolls Royce Drophead Coupe. Kevin Mazzucola, executive director of the Automobile Dealers Association of Greater Philadelphia, promises "there will be something for everyone."

The consumer experience at the show has expanded beyond seeing, touching and sitting in the cars. Jeep will feature its Camp Jeep experience, which allows participants to be driven through an obstacle course that includes 20-foot hills and logs. Professional drivers will drive car show attendees through Toyota Hybrid's eco-friendly course to demonstrate the agility of the Toyota Prius.

Mazzucola touted the technology in the new models that makes driving easier, safer and more convenient than ever. "People want their cars to be their living rooms," he said. "They want to access their e-mail and text messages as if they are home."

For those who are prone to becoming drowsy behind the wheel late at night, some new cars prevent drivers from falling asleep. "The sensors in the car measure eye movement. If they sense you are sleeping, they will activate a vibrating mechanism in the seat which will wake you up," Mazzucola explained.

Dealers in the region consider the auto show an important marketing tool.

"Thirty to thirty-five percent of all vehicles sold in our market are directly tied to the Philadelphia Auto Show," said Mazzucola. "They either confirm their decision or find another option that they did not know was available."

While cars that drive for you are still not available to the general public, models that will parallel park themselves are on sale.

"Brands such as Ford, Lincoln, Mercury and Toyota now offer Park Assist technology," he said. "The driver places the car where he would to begin to parallel park. Then he presses a button and takes his hands off the wheel. The car parks itself by using sensors."

Toyota preparing for a makeover

According to new head of design Tokuo Fukuichi, the company lacks character Competitors driving world's largest car maker to change Brand looks to leave behind 'plain vanilla' styling

When Tokuo Fukuichi was brought back to Toyota Motor Corp to become head of design, he was given a simple directive from President Akio Toyoda: Make Toyota cars simple and cool. He took a risk and objected.

"I said, look, Mr. President, just cool is not good enough," Fukuichi told Reuters. "Toyota had already tried hard to fix ugly parts and make them look better. What Toyota lacks the most is character."

Fukuichi, 61, knows something about character. In the late 1980s, he designed the first-generation Previa, also known as the "egg-van" — one of the most love-it-or-hate-it Toyota vehicles ever.

For Toyoda, who has criticized his company for losing sight of the fun and excitement of the automobile and has tried to shake up its stodgy and engineer-dominated design process, Fukuichi brought the right kind of edginess to the job. In a rare move, he asked Fukuichi to rejoin Toyota in 2011 after he had left for group company Kanto Auto Works.

Two years on, Toyota's designs are starting to show signs of change. From luxury brand Lexus' pinched-in-the-middle "spindle" grille to the Auris hatchback's sharply angled headlights, Toyota is taking steps to distance itself from a legacy of "plain vanilla" styling.

Not everyone is happy. At a shareholders' meeting in June, the very first issue raised from the floor was a complaint about the new "face" of Lexus models. But Fukuichi is unfazed.

"If we don't take risks now, there will be no future for us," he said. REUTERS

Tough competitions

Analysts say Toyota, the world's largest car maker by sales volume, has been driven to change. Toyota is being is squeezed between brands such as BMW and Volkswagen's Audi, which are seen as leaders in design, and a fast-rising rival in Hyundai that has won praise for the way it has managed to make its mass-market sedans look far more expensive. "Competitors are on the rise, and they are generally improving in areas such as safety technology and fuel efficiency," said Kunihiro Matsumoto, an autos analyst at UBS Securities in Japan."

GM enters talks with Facebook about ads

General Motors Co. and Facebook Inc. are discussing the return of the U.S. automaker as a paid advertiser about eight months after GM said it would stop running ads on the social networking website, a top GM executive said.

Alan Batey, GM's interim marketing chief, said at the Detroit auto show that discussions with Facebook officials were ongoing, though the Detroit company had nothing to announce about a return to Facebook as a paid advertiser.

"We're still actively talking to them and looking at opportunities that come our way," Batey told Reuters on Tuesday. "I wouldn't tell you that there's a Mexican standoff here. We just didn't see the value" in the ads.

Three days before Facebook's May 2012 IPO, GM said it was dropping paid ads on the website because they had little impact on consumers.

Also last May, GM said it would not advertise on CBS during the 2013 Super Bowl because the ad spots were overpriced. Batey said that decision remained in place. REUTERS

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. To be on the safe side, it would be wise to avoid issues on which you and your special someone hold strong, opposing views. It won't take much to light the other's fuse..

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Harboring a negative attitude will have a strong effect on the results of everything you do. This will include even most assignments that you normally perform by rote.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. You are entitled to have some fun and enjoy yourself, as long as you don't overindulge or spend too lavishly on your personal pleasures. Both would carry heavy penalties.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Emphasizing only your interests without any concern for those of others will not only turn off everyone, it will lessen your hopes of getting what you want as well.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Guard against a tendency to make a snap judgment based on incomplete information. An incorrect conclusion will take you completely off track and only confuse you further.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. It's never a good day to lend to or borrow from a friend, so don't start now. Discipline might be required in order to avoid doing so, but it behooves you to muster up the necessary strength.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Our behavior is always being scrutinized by our peers, opponents and supporters. Don't try to please them all

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Even if you believe your ideas and methods are better than those of others, they don't want to hear it, so keep it to yourself. Instead, try to accept others' points of view with an open mind.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. It behooves you to be extremely cautious about how you use your money, especially if you're considering a major investment. Make sure you have all the facts at your disposal.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. This could be one of those days when you feel that everyone but you is out of step with the world. Unfortunately, the reverse is likely to be true, and it's you who is not in sync with the majority.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. The only way you'll be able to lighten your share of the load is to acquire some assistance. However, your chances of getting others to drop what they're doing to help you are nil.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. You can be either great or completely horrible about managing your or anybody else's resources. Be careful, because today it might be the latter.

Eat rabbit food, not rabbit stew

RE: "SO YOU WANT TO GO VEGAN IN 2013?" (METRO, JAN. 16) As a physician, I was delighted to see attention finally being paid to the health benefits of a vegan/vegetarian diet. Never has it been easier to explore non-meat options and alternatives, and even die-hard meat eaters are enjoying readily available products such as Garden and Morningstar Farms. I have long urged my patients to consider decreasing or eliminating the amount of meat they eat — not just to benefit their own health, but also to help impact the negative effects of a meat-based diet on wildlife, the environment and world hunger. Last but certainly not least is the amount of animal suffering that can be reduced by enjoying just a few vegetarian/vegan meals a week. There are certainly many reasons to "go vegan," and there has never been a better time. PATRICE GREEN, MD, VIA E-MAIL

These days: Buy a gun, get a pale horse for free

When the founding fathers added the Second Amendment to the Constitution, I think the freedom to own and bear arms had the premise that those weapons would be used in a rational and responsible manner, one that did not jeopardize the safety and security of fellow, law-abiding citizens. In light of our increasing rate of addictions to alcohol, drugs, pain killers and other prescription medicines, not to mention the myriad of other social debilitations which contribute to irrationality and irresponsibility, the public is justified in doubting the sanctity of the earlier premise. A high-powered assault weapon with an extended magazine in the hands of a dysfunctional person is a devastatingly destructive combination. We can no longer be dogmatic about the Second Amendment the way literal evangelicals are dogmatic about the creation, ignoring opposing data and evidence. GLENN HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

With the money NRA makes from the sale of firearms, and the contributions they receive from organizations and people supporting their cause, it would only be fair that the NRA be solely responsible for compensating the victims of gun violence, instead of the taxpayers — in particular, since many of us are in favor of gun control. LUZETTE ALVARADO-ORTIZ, VIA E-MAIL

Kelly 'all in' with Eagles, college days behind him

New coach impressed with fans, organization Promises not to return to college ranks Birds' offense will reflect personnel

GETTY IMAGES

Kelly is in the process of evaluating his roster and picking a coaching staff.

Chip Kelly has been billed as a tireless worker, constantly studying and breaking down game film. His first assignment on his first day at his new job was ingratiating himself to the locals.

At his introductory press conference Thursday, Kelly jokingly referenced both the Wing Bowl and Vince Papale. The new Eagles coach called Philadelphia a "special situation."

"It was very evident to me, it's an iconic franchise with a passionate, passionate owner and great people in this company, and that's the thing that struck me," he said.

When the Eagles first approached Kelly about the job, about 11 days ago, he turned it down to stay at Oregon. But Eagles GM Howie Roseman kept in contact with Kelly and through a mutual friend heard that Kelly was wavering.

Talks heated up Tuesday night, and after Kelly had a chance to address his college team privately, he phoned Eagles owner Jeffrey Lurie to tell him he was ready to leave campus. Kelly called the decision final.

Quoted

"I know that the second most important bowl besides the Super Bowl, which is my goal, is the Wing Bowl."

KELLY

"I burned the boat. I'm not going back [to college]," he said. "I made the jump. I want to be an NFL coach."

Kelly is in the process of evaluating the Eagles' roster and selecting assistant coaches. He raved about Nick Foles but wouldn't name a starting quarterback. All that will come soon enough.

"We're going to look at everything we can do to put the best product on the field," he said. "There's nothing that's on the board right now. There's nothing that's off the board right now."

Reid

New coach thanks Reid for friendly advice

Would an owner of a Fortune 500 company consult a fired employee about his replacement? Probably not, yet that's what Jeffrey Lurie did when he reached out to Andy Reid to glean insight on Chip Kelly.

Reid, in turn, contacted Kelly to sell him on the Eagles' organization. Big Red sent Kelly a text message Wednesday to congratulate him.

"One person that I want to thank, in terms of advice in this whole thing, was Andy Reid and the fact that Andy reached out to me and told me about his experience here just told me what this organization's all about," said Kelly.

Just Oregon or Birds for Kelly

The Eagles weren't the only NFL team interested in hiring Chip Kelly. The Browns, led by former Eagles president Joe Banner, also held court with him, but those talks disintegrated when his meeting with Eagles brass ran long.

"We were not in competition with anybody for any of our candidates," owner Jeffrey Lurie said. METRO

Flyers and Penguins set to renew rivalry, imagine possibilities

Orange and Black open Saturday afternoon at the Wells Fargo Center ◗ Giroux, Couturier lasting images of epic playoff series

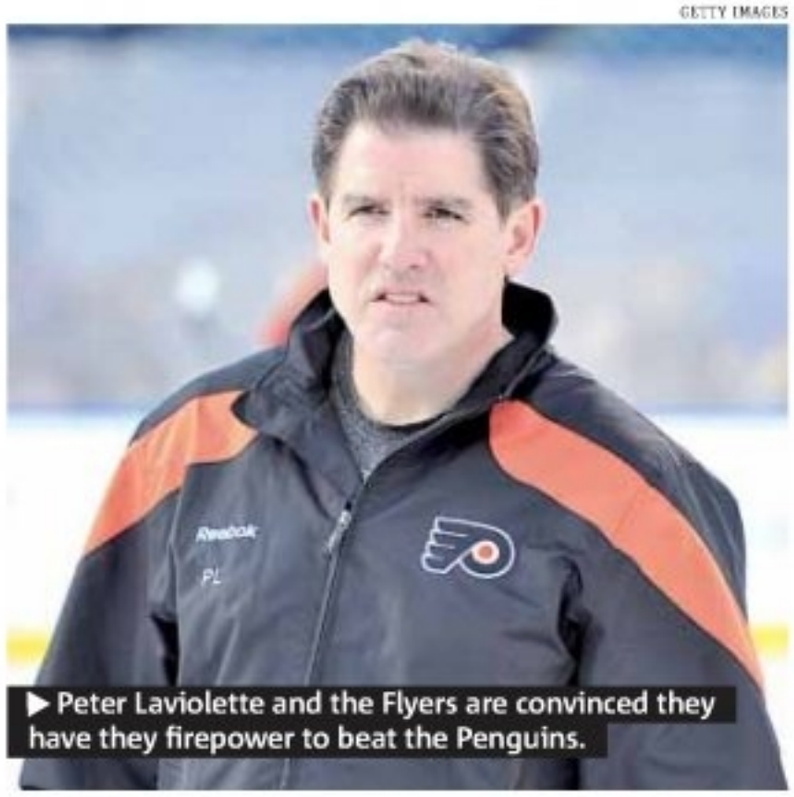
Close your eyes and you can picture Claude Giroux drilling Sidney Crosby into the boards off the opening face-off of Game 6, then scoring the goal less than a minute later.

Visualize 19-year-old Sean Couturier beating Marc-Andre Fleury to complete a Game 2 hat trick. And don't forget how the Penguins kept taking runs at Giroux, Couturier and Brayden Schenn, with James Neal and Arron Asham drawing suspensions.

Well, you don't have to use your imagination anymore. The puck drops 3 p.m. Saturday to start the NHL's 48-game sprint to the playoffs. And to whet our appetites, guess who they have squaring off in the opener? You got it.

"I kind of figured they'd do something like that after last year's playoffs," said defenseman Braydon Coburn, one of the cornerstones on a blueline that sees Luke Schenn replacing Matt Carle. "You talked to anybody who watched, that was one of the most exciting series. We have a great rivalry with those guys."

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Peter Laviolette and the Flyers are convinced they have they firepower to beat the Penguins.

Despite their first-round flameout, Crosby, Evgeni Malkin & Co. are still considered by many to be the team to beat.

ON TV SATURDAY

Penguins at Flyers, 3 p.m. (NBC)

"It's gonna be a great game," said right wing Jake Voracek. "Everyone's pumped up for the season to start. Obviously, the end of last season for them wasn't the way they wanted. That's why they're gonna come in harder."

The Flyers are convinced that they have the firepower and checking to beat their cross-state rivals. If Ilya Bryzgalov does his part in goal, they feel there's no reason they shouldn't win.

"It's gonna be a great test," said Couturier, who will be on a line with Voracek and Matt Read — until Danny Briere makes it back from a hairline fracture of the wrist. "I'm starting to get used to the rivalry. It's big. We've got to find a way to get the two points and start it out the right way."
